. . . We stumbled . . . fumbled . . . made some mistakes . . .racked our brains being original . . . it's done . . . at last . . . we're talking about the '45 Ghost in notes, of course . . . wading through red tape . . . listening to that ever-present, all-explaining phrase . . . "There's a war on" you know . . . to get material . . . especially film which was never sufficient . . . we rushed . . . ran . . . overtimed . . . to beat the deadline . . . hope we have attained our purpose . . . to present to you a pictoral scrap-book lightened with a theme of musical measure . . . of the drudgeries . . . thrills . . . and highlights of school life in '45 . . . hope you like it.

Dedication

"Yankee Doodle" . . . "Battle Hymn of the Republic" . . . "Over There" . . . whether the horizon was decked in the black of war or the dove white of peace . . . Americans have always loved and sung songs . . . mirroring the nation's ideals, hopes and emotions . . . some melodies live on while others faded . . . but to our boys in khaki . . . in navy blue . . . in field green . . . who chorus our country's sentiments . . . in a song whose inspiration will live in infamy . . . "Remember Pearl Harbor" . . . we dedicate this book.

Superintendent of Schools, R. D. Noble . . . arranger and composer . . . the most important cog in the all-star band . . . regarded making a good school even better his chief concern . . . his blueprints kept the bandwagon in the groove . . . a leader true.

Superintendent's secretary . . . pert and pretty, Notalie Allison . . . a jack of all trades . . . she pitched in with typewriter, mimeograph, and sympathetic ear . . . another of the unknown that sandpaper the rough edges off school life.

Our own Toscanini . . . George Lee, principal, waved the baton gracefully and efficiently . . . he accentuated the positive and eliminated the negative during the whole show . . . H. Hoover took the stand when the maestro stepped down . . . stayed at the top of our hit parade.

There's A Song In The Air

. . . as voices of mixed choristers ring through the halls of O. H. S. . . . brightening the spirits of those who hear their blending tones.

Christmas . . . and throats of teen-age vocalists swelled with carols forever sung . . . in harmony sweet they told again the season's story . . . in clear and lovely lines they followed the baton of Mrs. Baldwin.

Spring . . . and the budding of the earth was rivaled by the beauty of melody . . . as once again the musical artistry flowed in Senior High . . . on May 4 . . . Gershwin . . . Youmans . . . Porter . . . shared the spotlight under Mrs. Larson's direction.

BOB CHADO

● One major letter in basketball. Handicapped by playing only the last semester due to residence ineligibility. Nevertheless, Bob became a very capable reserve forward. He was the fastest man on the squad and one of the best ball handlers.

DEAN CHRISTIANSEN

● Two major letters in basketball. Playing both forward and guard and scoring well from either, Dean proved to be a fine competitor and team player.

JIM DEYO

● One major letter in basketball. Clever dribbling and accurate passing were his outstanding skills. Jim was slated to be next year's mainstay but enlisted in the world's best team, the U. S. Navy.

DICK FRIDLEY

● First year in basketball. Placed at disadvantage by his inexperience, Dick nevertheless developed into a capable player.

JACK HANCOCK

● Two major letters in basketball. A skillful and consistant scoring forward. Jack's playing was characterized by his tenacious defensive and rugged rebounding. Coaches placed him on the first All-Conference team.

ARLO JENSEN

● A rough, tough guard, "Ole" was the spirit lifter of the squad. His jovial manner served to apologize for his football tactics.

JACK RICE

● One major letter in basketball. A deceptive pivot player, Jack was the leading scorer on the '45 quintette. Coaches from the opponent schools voted him All-Conference center.

BOB RUTHERFORD

● Two major letters in basketball. Hitting his stride in the tournament games, Bob was the reserve center. He was placed at center on the second All-Conference team.

HOWARD SMITH

● Two major letters in basketball. One of the most outstanding defensive guards in O. H. S. history. Howard proved the ironman of the squad when he held the opponents' high scorers to a few points a game. Unanimous choice for All-Conference guard.
